

First Aid – Professional Development Update

Professional Development Workshop for First Aid Trainers and First Aid Providers

The field of healthcare is continually evolving and it is important that the way we teach keeps pace with advances in first aid care. First aid trainers and providers play a vital role in patient care and their management can make a real difference to patient outcomes.

This workshop will challenge some of the assumptions and traditions about first aid training and explore some of the current controversies in first aid and basic life support.

WORKSHOP CONTENT

- Tourniquets and bleeding control - a blast from the past or back to the future
- To breathe or not to breathe - the truth about compression-only CPR
- Burns – some things stay the same
- Spinal immobilisation – the evidence for change
- Oxygen – yes, no or maybe?
- First aid on a small scale – are children different?
- Challenges to today's first aiders – the agitated person a culturally aware treatment
- Teaching first aid from now to 2025 – embracing new ways of teaching
- Getting a feel for the future – hands-on with the latest technology in first aid teaching
